The 2024 Mid-Biennial Budget is now final. It prioritizes accountability, sustainability, and equity by maintaining the City’s focus on investing in our most vulnerable, rejecting austerity, and ensuring vital JumpStart revenue is targeted at growing the health of our economy and community through housing, economic resilience, Green New Deal and equitable development. This package maintains and builds upon the adopted 2023-2024 biennial budget that prioritizes keeping our community cared for & housed, connected & resilient, and healthy & safe.

The Chair realigned funding streams to protect targeted JumpStart investments as codified in statute by restoring the near $20 million in JumpStart changes. The Chair moved $5 million more than the original budget proposal in September to affordable housing, and restored $2 million more back to the economic resilience category to build upon the investments in workforce training, small businesses, art and street activation. The adherence to the JumpStart spend plan means the budget allocations for 2024 now align with the codified four categories: affordable housing, Green New Deal, economic resilience and Equitable Development Initiative. The 2024 budget now invests $340 million in affordable housing in 2024, bringing the total investment across 2023-2024 to nearly $600 million. The budget repurposes funding for human services contract wage increases, childcare appreciation allotments, social housing initiative start-up costs, along with tiny house village relocation and code compliance staffing, which now come from the more appropriate General Fund revenue stream.

The Select Budget Committee’s package invests millions more into public safety and community health through early intervention and upstream solutions that create greater self-determination and economic stability and help address rising trauma and stress. This is accomplished through new investments in culturally competent counselling services and domestic violence services, after school programming, community safety coordinators, support for youth violence prevention workers, prefile diversion programming, the Harborview bedside gun violence interruption service, community cleaning directive for the Chinatown-International District, and more. The package includes a proviso freezing the funding for the Mayor’s proposed surveillance pilot until a Racial Equity Toolkit and Surveillance Impact Report by geographic location is complete.

After a nearly $10 million combined downturn in revenue to support transportation and infrastructure in the October revenue forecast, the Chair realigned funding streams to fully close that gap. This includes appropriating $3 million from the General Fund to fully fund the transportation investments planned in 2024. This move avoids broad cuts to safe streets and infrastructure projects, including Vision Zero projects, bridges, sidewalks, or safe school investments.

The Mayor’s proposed budget did not include a proposal for new revenue; it did expand the gap between revenue and expenditures to a total of over $247 million dollars a year on average starting in 2025. The projected deficit as of right now with the Budget Committee’s changes have been reduced to $218 million annually beginning in 2025 (the improvement is primarily from the forecast update and an error in the transmitted financial plan), but a gap that still must be closed in 2025 when the temporary use of JumpStart progressive revenue can no longer supplant the General Fund. The Select Budget Committee will continue its discussion of revenue and fee legislation on November 30th, prior to the completion of the 2024 budget process. Given additional analysis and development needed on revenue options, the work Council has begun to develop and pass revenue to fully close the City’s budget gap will need to continue in 2024, and the looming revenue challenges that are on the horizon in 2025 and beyond must continue to be front of mind. Our city values do not align with a budget that assumes this level of coming austerity. The future of our city and the sustainability of our community is too important to gamble on.
